Don't Understand

This poem was inspired by the manifesto of The Revolutionary Front For The Liberation Of Macclesfield, whose sole terrorist attraction was the killing, by drop kicking, of two Yorkshire Terriers.

Geologists cannot explain the seam of tin ore which London Transport were shocked to discover under the Thames in the 1950s—now exploited by the famous Greenwich Tin Mine. The scientific consensus is that it got there by magic.

“Well OK”, I thought, “if she’s imagined some girlfriends for me, and got herself jealous of them, I’ll ask her out”. Her “no” was playful, but so proud.

If you are worried how to politely say hello when abducted by a UFO, remember the letters in the pseudonym “Neil Armstrong”, written backwards, spell the popular greeting “Gnorts, Mr. Alien”.

Water

The Anger Of Water

Through the netting
I watched the physician, resigned, prescribing.

He stopped writing,
looked out.
Shock drained him.

The sea had gone.
Death was arriving
two weeks early.

He fled, alone,
as though he could save himself.

Three Flawed

I just can't suss
that life guard.

I gets his gorgeous hands on me.

OK,
so I have to squirm
so he puts 'em
just right.

He gets to rescue
a beautiful girl, namely me.

He takes me
all the way to the edge of the pool.

So strong,
so masterful.

So why's he irate
when he finds
I faked it?

Viaduct

Where, once, the railway was embanked a field of cabbage now extends.

But every hundred paces, brick supports, the width of all four railway tracks, arise.

Look up to see, across the cloud, cables for the rails, and cables for the power.

No trains.

No birds.

No wind.

The Mere Of Ice

The morning's walk repair is stone-in-shoe disturbed at the cool wind glade:

high contrast light rushed dark leaves flashed sun.

The rain worn paper notice, on the silver slatted shutter-down kiosk commands us to walk the mere of ice, blind white

blotching pools slow earth.

But I know it will fail my doubt;
I take the grass and boulder soaring path, walking up the double-bended valley, watching down

on faith belief crash-drown.

At Buckfast Abbey

The monk, having seriously exercised his respect for Glasgow's wine, abstracted my queries regarding his life's order.

The ankle-low lamps coasted straight and narrow paths, giving the weak evening mist a siren's glamour.

A burglar alarm worried from chaotic directions; our movement let the monastery buildings dance the echoed panic.

In darkness brushed by nightfall's husk, the monks chanted like drill-men ritually thanking the Minister of Transport.

My fresh eyes were captivated by their Sunday chore, a ritual with incense, a sparkle in Latin.

when the trains first came verdant land life more than seen elsewhere somewhere birds flute their rapid haunt flower aroma allergy fresh their words names i used to know these the last trudging heavy miles walking home from thirty years adventure ive fought built won lost the lot all i have is god and memory i stop inhale the edge the ancient estate the childhood familiar buildèd hills wild life recreated raced replaced old monster trees lost forgotten the real change is human made felt people live more smoke mechanical cities rip a rush run panic dreary no stranger charmchat ive found lifes guide doubts fey no mock threat manipulation no selfish abuse this holy book unwraps the world all described dissected diagnosed see find somewhere hidden symbols discover compulsion underneath no need for sinners understanding the book tells judges i retribute here shafts stonestill shock me these tors these childhood joke and tumble hills these history halls rent by satan hades sulfic smoke rises vents bricked dug to hell risen fumes drift sins infection i see entry horizontal distant a road descent weak to hells mine ill walk casts gods light face rent the conjurers challenge follow grounded iron rods of sinner doom laid to guide me their hopeless i crunch walk dark echo the beast squeals knows me here it comes roars i stand immortal halt i shout a man of god is stood

Before The Bush War

Bush War, the next generation:
I'm ambivalent.

The arguments:
none arouse me.

Half the US army
unable to transverse Turkey:
unexciting.

America adventurous;
Britain ambitious;
France French:
dull.

Enough.
The sun rises.
I watch.

Namings

America

The “What–A–Good–Idea” Pilgrim Fathers brought no wagon,
brought no wheelwright.

One exasperated lady invented a working truck, the “Mary Cart”.

Now, in this time,
‘Lingua Franca’
meant what it said.

Affected fools
morphed their speech to French, sounding silent a word’s last consonant:

but not the end of Mary’s name for she was young unmarried; cracking shins for reputation.

So the words a Crown Inspector heard on riding the colony’s Mary cart were “er...this is a Mary car’.”

Bedford

Years ago,
bed design was perfected.
Reasons were spun for wheels:
sending from carpenter to customer, obsessive room re-arrangers, rocking bouncy kids to sleep.
Early beds had standard wheels.

Unfortunately,
young couples,
as young couples do,
experienced runaway passion, forgetting to put the handbrake on.
Beds bounced about,
buckshotting walls, canoning furniture, rocketing lamps, smithereening china.

Makers shrunk the bed wheel size, making transportation hard.
Convoys of beds,
raced across the countryside, became rare.

The difficulty was water.
In those days,
few rivers had bridges.
Goods with normal wheels transversed fords.
Beds were now ferried, increasing costs.

So those rare places with very shallow fords and a smooth river floor counted.

Such fords were found across rock–landscape rivers, and nowhere else,
except in West Anglia.

A merchant town grew up, named for the merchants' luck: Bedford.

Cambridge

In ancient days
the town of Ugg was filled by what would now be rudely called Neanderthals and peasants, and occasional flounced academics.

But the rich boys and the clever boys resented the rough and common culture, They caused a language strike–out against the sounded names; the hills of Gog Magog became the ‘Local Ridge’.

But ‘Local’ was too wuss.
A horizontal jogging entrepreneur, who gifted screaming services loud and hidden on the hills to gentlemen with cash, was Madame “Catherine Anna Maud Belgique”.
She was known, in spoken code when wives were nosy near, by her “Camb” initials.

Up grew the town
around the flouncing schools, whose name became,
from those wildly–rumour hills,
Camb Ridge.
But when that times’
unhumoured censorship collapsed, those earthen lumps reverted back ‘The Gog Magog’.

So now the town was only named for gifted screaming services.
An academic city named after a horizontal professional?
A king with cash to budget sensitive to scandal?
Something must be done.
But luck had struck;
the river could be named again, the town could claim a story good for getting grants, pseudo–history’s “Cambridge”.

Catford

The world's most evil moggy, so he liked to think,
was black cat "Ginger", his name and counter shade caused him bully curse at army kitty school.

His great delight,
this small and fluffing cat:
when dogs arrived to greet hello and sniff those places dogs must sniff; he'd swipe each black and feeling nose with slicing sharpest claws.

Even the best of dogs were stung, for that was Ginger's way.
But Brian was quite a special mutt, and had the nous to more than howl; he barked around, and quickly found that every local hound had felt those claws.

Now Ginger loved to sleep beneath his scratching tree by the catfish stream.
So Brian got half the local dogs to creep around and half-moon surround the napping sharpest claws.

And on the count of “whine two three”
the dogs all barked the barking song: “wr wr wr wr wr wr wr wr” but stopped halfway through verse two.
Ginger panicked up, and ran the only no-dog way, he rushed right through the water.

And now the devious plan enlightened, for on the other side were all the other dogs hiding silent at Brian’s behest, until the soaking cat had landed there.
And then they barked, how sharp they barked;
the panicked cat, he rushed right splashing back.

And this is what a travelling landlord heard:
“Wr wr wr wr” “mwah!’ splash splash “Wrf wrf wrf wrf” “mwah!” splash splash, and saw the panicked echo cat rush forth and back across the stream; he’d found a drunken place to build his inn.

And to this day, we’ve heard of Brian’s barkers, the famous “Catford Dogs”.

Keighly

Bertha Bright's childhood love was Keith Lea.
Bertha, only child, was heiress to fortune, to breath-sharp-in lung-ice fortune.

Keith grew proud and left the Pennines for ambition, so he'd return to Bertha all pride and rich desire.

Despite the decades
Bertha refused all doubt of him, spurning the assertive hands of vagabonds, awaiting Keith, her Odysseus.

But he did not return;
she died alone, unmarried.
This sad story so inspired the ladies of Doolally, they renamed their town for Bertha's love.

That's the official line.
Actually, Keith eloped a Swedish royal; and not just any royal but the Swedish king himself.

They hid in Malmo suburbs; Keith, professional man, a duck inspector;
the king, living his transvestite dream, scatty wife.

The neighbours had grasping eyes:
for the king overacted his bimbo avatar forgetting to remove his eye-draw crown when doorstep kissing Keith goodbye.

The Swedish State found their missing king.
Keith was banished to the empire's beyond, to Siberia,
where he died of a broken promise.

Of course Bertha knew Keith was gay.
She also knew heiresses handed fortunes over to husbands.

Manchester

Sister Hester's girlie dream was not a swirling gown or glitter jewels, but the biggest and bestest house
there ever was.

Every day at school in rugby class or hobnail boot and stamping club she dreamt the biggest and bestest house
there ever was.

There would be two hundred and ninety-three bathrooms one for every cat she'd ever sat on in the biggest and bestest house
there ever was.

So massive and humongously huge the mouse holes will be dragon holes in the biggest and bestest house
there ever was.

But Little Hester became Big Hester and her children grew up to be accountants she forgot the biggest and bestest house
there ever was.

And Big Hester became Granny Hester, telling them all of naughty naughty boys, she remembered the biggest and bestest house
there ever was.

And then a competition rose, rename the town of “Rainie”:
she thought of the biggest and bestest house
there ever was.

“Hester’s House? No. Hester’s Mansion?
Mmmm. Just manche. Yes, yes! Manche Hester!”, named after the biggest and bestest house there never was.

Milton Keynes

Two grand economists uniting like fusing hydrogen, and exploded as quickly apart again.
The younger, Milton Friedman, ran the world to Chile to invent half-built shopping-centres and military dictators.
The older, John Maynard Keynes, kept to England to invent stagflation (remember?), wine gums, and birthed their child.
Even today anyone is welcome to Milton Keynes.

Few people know donkey's ears later these two great economists reconciled and named the baby Gordon Brown.

Norfolk

“Nowt as queer as folk”, the famous Yorkshire phrase recites.

Five hundred year it’s been since this was set to one specific place.

A location full of so strangest people the idiom rode all the land’s gossip.

“Nowt as ... folk” it reduced, “Now folk” the locals counter–spun.

And when the counties came along this flub was spoken ‘Norfolk’.

Sandy

A sect, a now forgotten name, known by populist satire the “The No Naughty Nookie Nutters”, built a priory.

They chose a place to speak belief, to keep themselves entirely pure.

They made their beds in sand, so if desire decided to arise, the lust was broken scratched.

The town they built and bloated took the name of soil and county: Sandy Beds..

Instructions For A Common Ceremony

Fill the kettle up.
Put the kettle on.
Let the water boil.
Let the water cool.

Set the cone and cup.
Put the cone on top.
Put the filter in.
Spoon the coffee in.

Pour the water through.
Soak the coffee wet.
Use the water once.
Let the coffee work.

Throw the coffee dregs.
Drink the coffee drug.
Feel the tongue awake,
feel the mind inflate.

On The Sonnet

I couldn't write a sonnet, no matter how I tried. It's difficult to chop and fit my thoughts, my free expression thoughts, right now, right here, to such a rigid form. My wit is not the tight–arse type. My lines are full when I am done, no less, and never end at some exactly counted syllable.

What's said is key, not how. It's just a trend, this fancy verse, for populists; it's dropped as rot in modern poetry—and how can anybody teach that tightly cropped and strictly managed words can ever plough the spoken thought, the blurted crude opines, and crop the lot to only fourteen lines?

We Drunken Here

by A?H?H?a? A?x?M?a?T?o?B?a?

We drunken here, we harlots, in cheerlessness, we share.
Wallpaper flowers, wallpaper birds, for mist.

Your black pipe, its smoke ascends, to ink–blot hallucination.
I wear my lithe skirt for grace.

The window glass, rote sealed, blocks hoarfrost and thunder.
Your eyes wary at me,
eyes of a black cat.

Ai, dread forbodes me,
death mulls on me.
And she, she who last danced, she can go to hell.

This loose translation of A?H?H?a? A?x?M?a?T?o?B?a?'s 1913 poem is based on Max Hayward's literal translation, published in "Modern Poetry in Translation: 1983".

On Visiting San Francisco

In England the Earth occasionally burps, but here it constantly parties.

intelligence still booting up and walking morning early gravel eyed intelligence booting

i reach the pavement
there's a girlchild walkman dumb
step aside nerves

bins displayed mine's not turn back to promenade trash

and she looks at me
her arm pointing across to someone else's car

I say "that's not mine" she says "wot?"
I say "that's not my car" she says "I didn't say it was"

and the bus stops

watch the desire of love to exist

On Al-Qaida

you're dozing
you don't feel a sharp pain the mosquito is fed and gone

you're dozing
you feel a sharp pain you wake
the mosquito flies away you build a dyke
drain the swamp
all mosquitos die

al-qaida
islam's traitor

sixty years ago
the enemy destroyed our cities

we destroyed theirs and them

thirty years ago
an enemy wrecked so many human souls now this enemy's only home a lab

you can't honestly appraise yourself if you can't honestly appraise yourself you don't know where you're at if you don't know where you're at you're lost

On Science

science reflects the art of God.

when faced with contradictory truths select the truth with the strongest proof if contradictory truths have irrefutable proofs they don't contradict you've misunderstood

if you can't resolve irrefutable contradictory truths go meta

if objects cannot occupy the same space
at the same time

how can you look up to a sheet of sky
see two birds intersect untouched

when the morons declared war the youth me new to work temping signing on weeks off accused of working claiming they decided appealed decided not tell i sawn a letter nicely saying fuck off you bastard had they bothered to inform i'd have told em “you’re pissing your own knickers i didn't claim that week” hence the arsehole reputation of bureaucracy
